MARGARET WILSON, "THE PURITAN MARTYR."

Life-size Figure in Marble, by C. B. Birch, A.R.A.

ORNAMENTAL ITEMS.

LOT

206A LIFE-SIZE MARBLE STATUE OF MARGARET WILSON,
"THE PURITAN MARTYR," BY C. B. BIRCH, A.R.A.

In the reign of James II. of England, 11th May, 1685, two women, Margaret Maclachlan and Margaret Wilson, the former an aged widow, the latter a maiden of eighteen, suffered death for their religion in Wigtonshire. They were offered their lives if they would consent to abjure the cause of the insurgent Covenanters and attend the Episcopal worship. They refused, and were sentenced to be drowned. They were conveyed to a spot where the Solway overflows twice a day, and were fastened to stakes forced in the sand between the high and low water mark. The elder sufferer was placed near to the advancing flood, in the hope that her last agonies might terrify the younger into submission. The sight was dreadful. But the courage of the survivor was sustained by an enthusiasm as lofty as any that is recorded in martyrology. She saw the sea draw nearer and nearer, but gave no sign of alarm. She prayed and sang verses of the Psalms till the waves choked her voice. After she had tasted the bitterness of death she was, by a cruel mercy, unbound, and restored to life. When she came to herself, pitying friends and neighbours implored her to yield. "Dear Margaret, only say: 'God save the King!'" The poor girl, true to her stern theology, gasped out: "May God save him, if it be God's will!" Her friends crowded around the presiding officer. "She has said it; indeed, sir, she has said it." "Will she take the abjuration?" he demanded. "Never!" she exclaimed. "I am Christ's; let me go!" And the waters closed over her for the last time.

The name of Margaret Wilson, in the churchyard at Wigton, appears in the appendix to "Cloud of Witnesses:"

"Murdered for owning Christ supreme,
Head of His Church, and no more crime,
But her not owning Prelacy,
And not abjuring Presbytery,
Within the sea tied to a stake,
She suffered for Christ Jesus' sake."

The subject became, in the hands of Mr. Birch, a masterpiece of exalted heroism in the moment of death, and, as such, has received from many Critics of Art the highest praise.
